Avigdor Lieberman's centrist Yisrael Beiteinu party has joined a coalition whose members and partners are widely distrusted among Israeli Jews, including its former head Naftali Bennett. Bennett and his chief rival Benny Gantz, a former IDF chief of staff, have both indicated a willingness to form a coalition with the far-right Jewish Home party. But Yisrael Beiteinu boss Lieberman has told his lawmakers it will not join such an arrangement because it does not believe in Netanyahu's rule. The ultra-Orthodox Shas party, which Netanyahu hoped would bridge ethnic tensions with its non-religious voters, said it will not take part, in a sign of the deepening divisions that could lead to a third election in less than a year. There are political implications for the foreign ministry, which is negotiating with Israel's closest Arab ally Egypt. It has also made a series of discreet overtures to Sunni Arab states in the Gulf, and to the leaders of Egypt, Jordan, and the Palestinian Authority in the West Bank. In January, the ministry put forward a plan for the Arab

To review retrospectively the results of definitive surgical treatment of intrahepatic cholangiocarcinoma (ICC) and the use of postoperative radiotherapy (PORT) after bile duct exploration. In an 18-year period between June 1985 and June 2003, we treated 107 patients who underwent surgery for potentially curable ICC (25 T1, 54 T2, 28 T3, and 4 T4 tumors). From the patient selection criteria, 26 patients had negative percutaneous biopsy and underwent surgery with curative intent. Radical hepatic resections and PORT were performed in 18 and 8 patients, respectively. Clinicopathologic features, immediate and late results, survival, and patterns of failure were evaluated. Biopsy-proven patients were compared to patients with intraoperative findings of malignancy. Among the patients, 47% were Child B and Child C according to the Child-Pugh score. The most common presenting symptom was anorexia. The surgical procedures consisted of 22 hepatectomies, 10 segmentectomies, and 1 caudate lobectomy. The PORT was delivered by multiple fields either to the bed of the portal bifurcation (18 patients) or to the bifurcation of the right and f678ea9f9e
